

Jamie Slama

Mrs. Slama is currently the Statewide Training/ Certification Coordinator for the New Mexico Department of Health (NMDOH) Office of Community Health Workers (OCHWs). Jamie has been with the Department of Health for seven years, before working for the state she was a nationally certified medical assistant with ABQ Health Partners. She graduated from Wayland Baptist University with her bachelor's in human services. She currently is the lead trainer for the Office of Community Health Workers. She and her colleagues have worked diligently on locating and certifying as many Community Health Workers in New Mexico. The past year she has worked on many COVID19 efforts to help keep New Mexicans safe during this pandemic. Her vision is to see that Community Health Workers get the recognition they so desperately deserve. Jamie sees the value of state certification of CHWs in New Mexico and is currently a certified Community Health Worker herself.
